Reflect Strong Leadership Team for Womens Food Alliance

By Leigh Cort

Women from all across the Georgia Coast and North Florida are building a network to strengthen female representation in the hospitality industry through the Womens Food Alliance (WFA). From restaurant proprietors and super chefs to event managers, bakery entrepreneurs, and book authors, these accomplished women are maneuvering through the tides of change as they navigate the hospitality landscape of 2025 with the diversity of careers and cultures.

Celebrating its 12th anniversary, WFA nurtures and supports their members as they grow and work toward success yet to come. The future in hospitality reveals promising trends. The WFA is expanding its Leadership Team to stand together through enduring challenges as a 'sorority' of business leaders.

The hospitality industry offers a vibrant and colorful career path today. Guiding this path can also come with challenges. Led by Founder Leigh Cort, the Womens Food Alliance is, and has been since 2013, dedicated to empowering their members and providing them with connections, opportunities and tools needed to advance. Continuous learning and networking are essential. Through the members' eyes and experiences, building a strong caring network opens doors to new ideas, industry knowledge and gathering support from peers. Simply engaging with industry associates, attending meetings and events plus participating (showing up) expands those connections. Sharing trends, technologies and customer feedback is crucial to staying ahead with an open mind.

Through the years, Womens Food Alliance members have become trusted mentors who play a pivotal role in career growth. Mentors understand many obstacles and know that fostering a supportive organization is vital to thriving and achievement.
